Why Study in London?

London is a thriving multicultural city boasting cutting-edge music, art and fashion. On the Citadel Summer in London program, students are given the opportunity to experience firsthand this complex society through coursework and co- and extra-curricular activities. Spending time in London as a student is a truly unforgettable experience. The city's modern cosmopolitan identity combines a fascinating past with a present that sees more than seven million people living, studying, working and playing in its different areas. The arts, theater, nightlife, music and literature are just some of the things in which London excels, and just some of those that students can expect to experience during their summer study program.

About FIE

This Citadel program is run in conjunction with the Foundation for International Education (FIE). Established in 1998, FIE is a private, independent, non-profit educational exchange organization based in London offering academic year, semester or summer study abroad programs for undergraduate students. FIE believes that interaction between diverse peoples is the basis on which international empathy is built. FIE is guided by and fully committed to the ideal that education broadens horizons and gives perspective on the world outside one's own immediate, individual experience.

Program Curriculum

Administered by The Citadel Department of English and the Foundation for International Education, The Citadel Summer in London program is a six-credit, six-week session in which students take two classes: a survey of British literature or film and an elective.

Program participants take classes and live in the heart of London's Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea, a centrally located area close to many of the city's universities, libraries, museums, theaters, and famous tourist sites.

While enrolled in Major British Authors II: Romanticism to the Present, students take part in a variety of activities, including attending a production of the Royal Shakespeare Company, taking a backstage tour of the National Theater, examining the manuscript collections of the British Library, visiting the Lake District and generally enjoying British culture.

Depending upon one's chosen elective class, other hands-on learning opportunities may include research trips to the British Airways London Eye and Covent Garden, dinner seminars led by experts in international marketing and tourism, and visits to the main mosque at Regent's Park and the Ismaili Centre, a Muslim religious, social, and cultural center. Trips to Ireland, Scotland and other European countries are also possible.

Courses

One of These Courses:

Major British Authors II: Romanticism to the Present

In this course, we will survey the literature of Great Britain and its empire from the end of the eighteenth century to the present, drawing connections between literary and socio-historical issues. We will read a range of canonical and lesser-known texts, with the aim of exploring how these texts have shaped and been shaped by aesthetic, cultural and political developments.

Film Studies: War and Social Conflict

This course will introduce students to a variety of classic and newer films about war and social conflict. We will build a working vocabulary of film terms and techniques by discussing films, selections from an excellent film textbook, and critical essays that deal with specific films and larger issues (issues in the film industry as well as historical/cultural issues related to the films we view). Students can expect this course to be both fun and interesting, and can also expect it to enrich their viewing of all types of films.

Plus This Course:

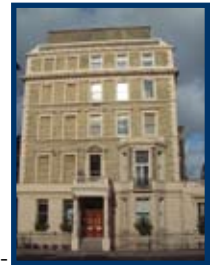

Understanding Civilizations: Islam and the West

The profound urgency to develop mutual understanding between the West and the Islamic World has been highlighted by a myriad of violent events over the last decades. On the assumption that ignorance is the enemy of peace, this course intends to explore the sources of conflict that have led towards the notion of a clash of civilizations.

Facilities

Foundation House

FIE's primary study center, Foundation House, is centrally located on Cromwell Road, one of London's main arteries leading into the heart of the city. The five-story Edwardian mansion stands opposite the Gloucester Road Underground Station in the Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea. Foundation House includes eight well-equipped classrooms, a meeting room, faculty offices, a student common room and administrative offices for FIE staff. Foundation House is equipped with controlled access via PIN code or buzzer, and protected by CCTV.

Accommodation

FIE offers student accommodations based in historic and charming Kensington, just a few minutes walk from the Foundation House Study Center. Student residential buildings in the Kensington area are usually mid- to late-nineteenth century converted townhouses. Bedrooms are fully furnished with twin beds and dressers. The majority of students live in double-occupancy rooms, while some will live in single, triple or quadruple rooms. Common kitchens are equipped with utensils such as cookware, silverware and dishes. Metrogate Residence also houses a complete teaching kitchen. Coin-operated laundry facilities are available at Metrogate for use by FIE residents. Common living areas in each residence allow students to interact frequently with each other.

Highlight: Host UK

The Citadel Summer in London includes a weekend stay with a host family through the Host UK program. You will be placed with a family in one of a variety of fascinating locations throughout the country, and enjoy a weekend of home-cooked meals and insights into the way of life of an average British family.
