KEY ARCHITECTURAL HISTORY PROJECTS

2002 Cultural Resource Management Plan for the City of North Charleston, South Carolina
The plan set out actions to protect the proposed Olde North Charleston Historic District and Neighborhood Conservation District by preserving the character of the area, and preventing incompatible development. Additional neighborhoods were identified where historic overlay districts should be established.

2004 Intensive Architectural Survey of the Charleston Upper Peninsula.

The project began with brief background research regarding the historical development of the City of Charleston, especially the Upper Peninsula. This research helped to identify, assess, and interpret the aboveground historical resources within the Survey Universe, as well as to develop the various historic contexts for the survey area. After field survey, it was determined that five individual resources within the Survey Universe were eligible for the NRHP. In addition, the SHPO determined that four districts within the Survey Universe were potentially eligible for the NRHP.

2006-2007 Georgia Grantham Architecture Survey, Madray Springs, Wayne County, Georgia.
Completed a historic sites survey focused on identifying and inventorying properties within approximately 50 square miles in the vicinity of Madray Springs, Wayne County, Georgia. Properties were identified through visual reconnaissance and then were documented, mapped, and photographed. The collected information was entered in the Natural, Archaeological and Historic Resources Geographic Information System (NAHRGIS) online database.

2009 Elba, Alabama Historic District National Register of Historic Places Nomination, Coffee County, Alabama. Completed a National Register of Historic Places Nomination for the City of Elba Historic District.

2009 Calvert County Historic and Rural Roads Inventory, Calvert County, Maryland.

Conducted an inventory of the county's historic and rural roads. The inventory was used to develop recommendations and strategies for protecting the county's historic and rural roadways.

2010-11 Fort Sumter and Battery Huger, Charleston Harbor, Charleston County, South Carolina. Produced a Historic Structure Report (HSR) that elucidates the construction history, past treatments and future treatments for Fort Sumter and Battery Huger. The report paints a picture of the evolution of the Fort from ca. 1829 to the present and the evolution of the Battery from ca. 1900 to the present. The report serves as the foundational guide for all future preservation efforts.

DOCUMENTARIES

"Bin Yah: There's No Place Like Home" Documentary Film (ChasDoc Film Society).

Served as the historian for a documentary that explores the potential loss of important historic African American communities in Mt. Pleasant, S.C due to growth and development. Through the testimonies of the residents themselves, the film explores the culture, the history, the importance of land and the concept of home, giving a voice to those who seldom have had a chance to be heard. A proposed highway extension threatens to bisect these close-knit neighborhoods of cousins and kinfolk, established by freed slaves and home to generations of their families for hundreds of years. Many residents are artisans and craftspeople, practicing traditional skills including sweetgrass basket making, brought over from West Africa and handed down from mothers and fathers to sons and daughters. The documentary attempts to preserve—at least on film—the memories of the special places that may be lost forever as the struggle between the real “bin yahs” and the “come yahs” escalates. The documentary was presented on PBS/SCETV “Southern Lens.”
