What is Air Force ROTC?

Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) is an educational program that allows men and women to pursue a commission in the United States Air Force, while also obtaining a college degree. The purpose of Air Force ROTC is to develop leaders and officers for tomorrow's Air Force and Space Force.

Comprehensive program requirements are listed at www.afrotc.com/what-it-takes/

Cadet Curriculum

On a weekly basis, all cadets will attend an Aerospace Studies class, physical training sessions and a Leadership Lab. The program is tailored to four academic years but can be condensed to three or extended to five years in certain circumstances.

General Military Course (GMC)

Typically composed of freshman and sophomore students, the GMC consists of one credit hour classes focusing on the culture, benefits and history of the Air Force.
Freshmen: Fall AERO 101, Spring AERO 102
Sophomores: Fall AERO 201, Spring AERO 202

Field Training Evaluation (FT)*

A selective and intense summer training session, usually attended between a cadet's sophomore and junior years, FT places a heavy focus on leadership under pressure, teamwork, and expeditionary skills.

Professional Officer Course (POC)

Upon completing FT, cadets enter the POC, with emphasis on leadership principles, national security topics, and active duty preparation.

Juniors: Fall AERO 301, Spring AERO 302
Seniors: Fall AERO 401, Spring AERO 402

Leadership Lab (LLAB)

LLAB is a weekly training session designed to acclimate cadets to the military environment and to develop their leadership skills.

Physical Training (PT)

Physical fitness is a way of life for military service members. Cadets are expected to attend one weekly Air Force PT session in addition to the Citadel Corps PT.

Cadets must be nationally selected for Field Training in order to continue in the ROTC program*
