DESCRIPTION: The Citadel is seeking written quotes for a virtual dissecting/digital cadaver table for use in classroom instruction and coursework. The table must contain operating software to allow Cadets from multiple departments to realize the benefits of having access to digital models of real human cadavers. At The Citadel, we only have plastic human models which can be limiting when it comes to learning about anatomy and physiology in a variety of majors (Biology, Exercise Science, Physical Education and Nursing). This tool will be utilized by our early career nurses and pre-med students as they get first hand exposure to real human systems and how things can go wrong, eventually leading to death. The offered digital cadaver table must be able to allow Cadets and instructors to teach from human models (and case studies), and also use animal models to aid in teaching comparative anatomy and physiology courses.

Minimum requirements to be considered for award:

- Table must be full-sized with a minimum length of seven (7) feet
- Table shall be moveable for easy classroom relocation
- Must be able to duplicate the table across two (2) displays with either HDMI or DisplayPort outputs
- Must be powered by a standard U.S. power outlet
- Table shall be interactive for use with students in classroom instruction
- Must be provided with operational software that fully supports teaching across multiple science disciplines and provides no charge software updates for the life of the table
- Updates are to be automatically delivered via network connection
- Operating software shall have multiple authentic cadavers to choose from
- Software shall include a curriculum to be used in classroom instruction
